Join FM NewsTalk 97.1 as two of our country's leading conservative standard bearers share the same stage. Sarah Palin first made history on December 4, 2006 when she was sworn in as the first female governor of Alaska. In August 2008, Senator John McCain tapped her to serve as his vice-presidential running mate in his presidential campaign, making her the first woman to run on the Republican Party's presidential ticket.

Glenn Beck, known for his quick wit, candid opinions, and engaging personality, has attracted millions of viewers and listeners through the United States with The Glenn Beck Program. His radio show is heard on over 400 stations. It is the third highest-rated national radio talk show among adults ages 25 to 54.

Do not miss this once in a lifetime opportunity to witness the fusion of two intellectual conservatives as they Defend the Republic on the Family Arena stage.

The Leadership Institute's flagship school, nicknamed "the boot camp of politics," provides you with effective techniques to organize and lead mass-based youth efforts for candidates and causes of your choice. The Youth Leadership School has launched more successful political careers than any other Leadership Institute training program.

Topics covered include:

- Building an effective student organization
- Getting out the vote
- Earned media (favorable publicity)
- Developing a public relations strategy
- Launching a successful career in politics

This school is held on college campuses across the country and at the Leadership Institute in Arlington, Virginia. You can register for the Columbia class by going to www.leadershipinstitute.org and looking for the "Upcoming Training Events". Use the drop down menu to register. Additionally, if you would like to contribute a scholarship fee, please contact Fred Berry. Fred lives in Columbia, MO home of MU, Williamwoods, Stephens, and Columbia College. Congratulations to Ron Calzone and all the grassroots patriots who weighed in this week on the Aerotropolis (Errotropolis) legislation in Jefferson City this week.

Message from Ron Calzone:

Regarding China Hub bill, we WON round one! The Senate has adjourned until Monday at 4pm. We have 5 days to talk to media and our senators. MOSIRA will now become a bill all to itself and not attached to the China Hub bill. It will need to be watched just as much as China Hub, as it has MORE subsidies than China Hub!

The Senate will probably meet tomorrow, but only for technical reasons. Big day begins on Monday at 4pm.

Total China Hub witness forms delivered last night to the senate: 774 !!!

To place your name and influence on the right side of issues affecting Missourians, go to the Missouri First website (<http://mofirst.org/>) to sign up and to learn more about the status of the China Hub/Aerotropolis bill.

Outrage As Obama Names New Voter Initiative After ACORN

Monday, 29 Aug 2011 06:49 PM
By David A. Patten and Jim Meyers

Government watchdogs are blasting the Obama campaign's decision to name its 2012 voter-registration initiative "Project Vote" — the same name as a group closely linked to the discredited ACORN organization. Members of ACORN were caught on undercover video giving two supposed clients detailed instructions on how to commit fraud, and ACORN faced a number of voter-registration fraud cases following the 2008 election.

Use of the Project Vote name by the Obama campaign is "truly astonishing," Tom Fitton, president of the conservative Judicial Watch good-government group, tells Newsmax. "We knew President Obama was the president from ACORN. And if this isn't an indication of it, we don't know what is." ACORN-linked Project Vote is a Washington, D.C.-based 501c3 nonprofit organization that supports voter-registration drives in "historically underrepresented communities."

But there is "no wall of separation" between Project Vote and the well-known ACORN organization, according to Matthew Vadum, the Capital Research Center editor who wrote "Subversion Inc.: How Obama's ACORN Red Shirts Are Still Terrorizing and Ripping Off American Taxpayers." He calls Project Vote "the branch of ACORN that's most notorious for voter fraud."

Vadum wrote in an American Spectator piece on Monday: "On registration and mobilization campaigns, ACORN and Project Vote work together to the point where it is a difficult, if not impossible, to tell the difference. They share staff, office space, and money." As an example he cites Project Vote's field director, listed on its website as Amy Busefink. In November, she pled no contest to two counts of conspiracy to commit the crime in Nevada of compensation for registration of voters. In January, she received a year of probation and a $4,000 fine. Vadum calls that incident "a major ACORN-approved voter fraud conspiracy."

Vadum tells Newsmax that the use of the Project Vote name for Obama's new voter-registration drive "says the Obama campaign is up to the same old tricks, that they're not afraid of being called out by the media. They know that they can continue to operate with impunity, encouraging voter fraud, and they're not going to be held accountable."

The decision to employ the Project Vote name was clear in a recent email from the Obama campaign: "Project Vote will embark on a voter registration effort to maximize voter participation. Project Vote will drive our campaign strategy — from paid media, to digital outreach, to grassroots organizing and voter registration efforts — to communicate with and engage key demographic groups."

Adopting a name so closely linked to ACORN, and President Obama's political career, could hardly be an accident, says Fitton. "It collapses the façade that there was any distinction between the Obama campaign and Project Vote in 2008."

Fitton speculates adopting the "Project Vote" name is intended as a "dog-whistle" to the Democratic base.

He adds: "If the Obama campaign was intent on trying to disassociate itself from the criminal activity which took place with its vendor last time, which was ACORN, using the name of their partner seemingly would be the wrong way to do it."

Obama has had well-documented ties with ACORN. In the 2008 race, his campaign paid $832,000 for voter-registration services in key primary states to Citizen Consulting Inc., an ACORN umbrella group that Fitton describes as "an ACORN front." The money was initially reported to the Federal Election Commission as payments for "staging, sound, lighting." The reports were corrected after their true nature was revealed by a Pittsburgh Tribune-Review expose.

In 1995, Obama helped represent the group in a lawsuit that forced Illinois to adopt a bill relaxing the standards for establishing voter eligibility, and he helped train ACORN's staff in Chicago. Obama's 2008 campaign relied heavily on expanding the electorate and registering new voters. His political strategists have indicated it will be a key component of his re-election effort as well.

Fitton says the Project Vote name shows that the Obama campaign plans to continue running its 2008 campaign playbook, despite the fraud associated with voter-registration activities that cycle. "It should alert people to the fact that Project Vote hasn't gone away," he says. "One of the big misconceptions has been that ACORN and Project Vote, which had been associated with voter registration issues in 2008, disappeared as a result of the scandals, as a result of the videos. And they haven't disappeared — the state ACORN groups are still operational, and obviously Project Vote is still using the ACORN method to register voters."

Vadum, whose book documents 54 voter-fraud convictions stemming from the 2008 elections, tells Newsmax that he expects ACORN to be just as active in the 2012 campaign as it was in 2008, although under a different brand. ACORN's state chapters have reconstituted themselves under new names, he says, and its affordable housing arm is now receiving money from HUD under a new name.

One in four Democrats wants to dump Obama

by Byron York Chief Political Correspondent

A group carries signs asking for immigration reform as they protest outside of the Fairmont Hotel before U.S. President Barack Obama arrives for a fundraiser May 25, 2010 in San Francisco, California. Hundreds of protestors from different political groups staged the demonstration at a campaign fundraiser for U.S. Sen. Barbara Boxer (D-CA)

A new poll by CNN and ORC International finds that 27 percent of Democrats would like to see their party nominate a candidate other than Barack Obama for president in 2012. In response to the question, "Do you think the Democratic party should renominate Barack Obama as the party's candidate for president in 2012, or do you think the Democratic party should nominate a different candidate for president in 2012?" -- 72 percent said they wanted to see Obama renominated. But 27 percent, slightly more than one in every four, said they wanted to see Democrats nominate a different candidate. One percent had no opinion.

The poll was taken August 24-25. In a survey taken in early August, 28 percent of Democrats said they wanted a different candidate. Polls taken in July and before showed Obama in a stronger position, with no more than 22 percent saying they preferred a different candidate. The current poll is based on interviews with 463 Democrats and has a margin of error of 4.5 percent.

The new poll is another indication of Democratic unhappiness with the president, but it does not mean Obama will face a challenge in his party's primaries. Despite the complaints of a few liberals like Sen. Bernard Sanders, the odds of a Democrat opposing the president appear to be something less than zero. But the new poll is still a matter of concern to Democrats, because it is yet another indication that there is significant disillusionment with the president within his own party. Whether those disaffected Democrats will come around to supporting Obama next year is an open question -- and perhaps the most worrying of the president's re-election bid.

MOPP

Note: A recent Fox poll indicated that 30% of Democrats would vote for Obama without question; and 34% of Republicans would vote along party lines no matter who the candidate may be...neither percentage constitutes a clear winning margin, as these percentages leave approximately 36% in the middle who are undecided...independents as well as disenfranchised Democrats...each party will need to "court" these voters in order to win in '12. These voters are "ripe for the pick'in"...MOPP volunteers will work on the precinct level to identify both conservative voters and those in the middle, establish an ongoing relationship with them and actively work to convince these voters to move our country in the 'RIGHT' direction!

NOTABLE QUOTES:

"Government goes to those who show up"...Author Unknown

"Educate and inform the whole mass of the people. Enable them to see that it is their interest to preserve peace and order, and they will preserve them. And it requires no very high degree of education to convince them of this. They are the only sure reliance for the preservation of our liberty."Thomas Jefferson “Smart Girl” Janis Kelly for Mayor ... of Ithaca!

Posted by William A. Jacobson Wednesday, September 7, 2011

You want to see me spike the football so hard the earth will shake harder than in the D.C. Earthquake?

You have not seen anything like what will take place here if Janis Kelly, Republican and unabashed Tea Party supporter, is elected Mayor of Ithaca. Her website, which should be live any minute, is KellyForMayor.org. You can follow her on Twitter and Facebook.

Here's some background on Kelly she sent to me in an e-mail:

I and several other Tea Party Republicans have been working for 3 years on rebuilding the formerly moribund City of Ithaca Republican Party from the ground up. Mayoral campaign is part of that longterm strategy, but the Dems are in such disarray that we might actually win....

I got into this because of Smart Girl Politics <http://smartgirlpolitics.ning.com/> which all Smart Girls and Smart Guys should join and support. Their previous national Smart Girl Summits are where I had activist training by AmericanMajority.org \(the best training out there\), and I also did candidate training with AmericanMajority.org a couple weeks ago.

Kelly was the only person speak out against Ithaca's absurd "City of Sanctuary" resolution at an Ithaca Common Council meeting in 2008. I just realized, she's also been a Legal Insurrection reader and commenter at least since early 2009.

Here's her platform:

We need business growth to pay for essential city programs. We must end job-killing political theater. Think I'm kidding? Go to a city planning board meeting. See the costly delays imposed by public scolds who have never created a single job and whose main agenda is stoking their own moral vanity. We must wrestle control of the city away from the "enlightened" and back into the hands of sensible Ithacans.

Tax dollars must not be poured into growing the city payroll, as was done with the tax money from new businesses that had been developed during Alan Cohen's administration. We need to shrink the city payroll, which is 70 percent of the budget.

We should stop using "what other cities pay" as the benchmark for city salaries. Use what a private worker earns. Government workers are paid 34 percent more than private workers.

We must stop using public money for favored private groups.... This is low-grade, politically correct corruption, and it is wrong. Elect Janis Kelly for mayor of Ithaca and I will work every day for honest, frugal, sensible government

Before you say, "you're out of your mind" if you think Kelly has a chance, keep in mind there are 3 well-known mainstream Democrats on the Democratic primary next Tuesday. One of them already has other party lines for November, so if the third wins the primary (which is expected), there will be two well-known liberal Democrats on the November, plus Kelly on the Republican line, and a couple of others running on independent lines.

As reported by the Cornell Daily Sun:

Disputes within the crowded Democratic primary field may help other candidates capture the mayor's seat, said Republican mayoral candidate Janis Kelly '71, chair of the city's Republican committee.

"I think the Democrats have some strategic problems and that this is the best chance for a Republican to win the mayoral race in the last 30 years," Kelly said, citing the possibility that all three Democrats could run on different party lines in November's general election. "The more people we have on the ballot to split the vote, the fewer any one [candidate] has to get to win." [note added: After the interview, one of the candidates was dropped from the Working Family party line for lack of valid petition signatures, so there may be two Democrats on the ballot, one on the Democratic line and one on the Independence line.]

Kelly needs money for a get-out-the-vote operation. You can donate to help conservative Janis Kelly.

Reprinted from: <http://legalinsurrection.com/2011/09/smart-girl-janis-kelly-for-mayor-of-ithaca/>

Note: Janis is an example of how grassroots conservatives, worthy of our support, are surfacing everywhere to take over government at all levels to restore values and principles to government from the bottom up. It is also testimony to how helpful the American Majority training she received was to her. We hope you will join us on October 1st for our MOPP Precinct Strategy and Training Seminar when we partner with American Majority to present "the best training out there" to take our efforts to the next level. As one of our Facebook friends, Erin Dunn, noted so perceptibly..."If we want to shift the party in the right direction, the direction of liberty, we must BE the party!"

A FEW HOURS A MONTH IS ALL IT TAKES....

Do you spend a few hours a month at a Tea Party, or working with your local grassroots organizations? Do you have a couple of hours a month to spend on a weeknight and/or the weekend to take our country back? Is yours, and your children's, liberty worth at least that?

The Neighborhood Precinct Committeeman Strategy CAN work...BUT WE NEED YOUR HELP!

JOIN MISSOURI PRECINCT PROJECT (MOPP) as we help move Missouri, and the country, in the right direction, precinct by precinct, so we can MOPP 'em up in '12!...LET'S ROLL!
